Local Screen Printing Business Now Accepting Bitcoin as Payment

Atlanta Shirt offering digital currency at checkout when ordering custom apparel

ATLANTA GEORGIA, Nov. 25, 2014 – Atlanta Shirt has joined the growing list businesses accepting the popular digital currency Bitcoin as payment. Customers can now pay for their custom t-shirt orders using Bitcoin, Dogecoin or Litecoin.

The decision to start accepting digital currencies allows the metro Atlanta t-shirt company to offer consumers more choices when shopping locally for custom apparel. Once considered a novelty, Bitcoin is still the world's #1 crypto-currency in use today. Other digital coins may sound like a meme but Dogecoin's are popular and valuable enough the community sponsored their very own NASCAR "Dogecar" driven by Josh Wise giving the "much fun" crypto coin some serious national television exposure. The Dogecoin community even helped raise $30,000 for the Jamaican bobsled team's after the team qualified for the 2014 winter Olympics.

While the company expects most customers to still pay using traditional methods of today, the privacy, security and savings will only increase those using digital currencies when shopping. "When customers pay using Bitcoin there are almost negligible transaction fees because the middle man's been cut out. Customers pay us directly virtually eliminating any transaction fee's for credit cards..." Said client manager Samantha Osborn. "...Because our costs are reduced when customers pay using digital currencies, we're able to pass along these savings to customers who pay using Bitcoin, Dogecoin or Litecoin. We've also made it easy for customer to learn more, purchase coins on our website if interested in getting started."

Atlanta Shirt is excited to join the growing list of businesses offering Bitcoin payments such as CVS, Target and Home Depot. There are now thousands of retailers accepting digital currencies and this is just another way of providing metro Atlanta with the most options and best service for custom screen printed t-shirts or other garments.
